

INTERPRETING PRIVACY PRINCIPLES

Enforcing Information Privacy Laws

A Free Symposium

Tuesday 3 July, 2007

1.30- 4.30pm

Level 8, 133 Castlereagh Street, Sydney

(Venue by kind permission of the Privacy Commissioner)

This symposium, organised by the Interpreting Privacy Principles Project at the Cyberspace Law & Policy Centre, UNSW, will explore the experience of enforcement of information privacy laws both in New Australia and in New Zealand.

The symposium will feature three prepared papers:

- Data Protection Litigation in New Zealand: Processes and Outcomes

Presented by: Gehan Gunasekara, Senior Lecturer in Commercial Law at the University of Auckland Business School

- Sword or shield? The role of a Regulator

Presented by: Mark Hummerston, Assistant Commissioner, Office of the Australian Privacy Commissioner

- Problems in enforcing Australian Privacy Laws - Some issues arising from complaint cases

Presented by: Nigel Waters, Principal Researcher, Interpreting Privacy Principles Project at the Cyberspace Law & Policy Centre, University of New South Wales

After these presentations there will be ample opportunity for questions and discussion about the issues raised.

While there is no charge for this event, we do need to know who is attending. If you would like to reserve or place please contact Abi Paramaguru on a.paramaguru@unsw.edu.au or phone (02) 9385 3337 with you name, organisation, role, contact phone number and email address.

Cyberspace Law and Policy Centre
A Centre for the Public Interest in Networked Transactions

The Cyberspace Law and Policy Centre, Faculty of Law, UNSW, Sydney NSW 2052 Australia

Tel: (02) 9385 3589 Fax: (02) 9385 1778

<http://cyberlawcentre.org/ipp/events.html>